Crocus planted in the Grass

GENERAL COLLECTION OF BULBS

FOR FALL AND WINTER PLANTING

Many varieties of bulbs are recommended for naturalizing or planting in mass for permanent effects scattered through the woodlands and shrubbery border. It will be noticed that they cost very little, and once planted quickly increase in quantity, coming up yearly as the harbingers of spring, and they should be more commonly used. For this purpose we recommend the following sorts marked with an asterisk in particular

Freesia refracta alba

NARCISSI AND DAFFODILS

There is nothing more suitable for planting promiscuously in the hardy border than Narcissi and Daffodils, and if the bulbs are planted 8 inches below the surface, the foliage may be cut off after flowering, without injury to the plant, they will bloom each spring, if left undisturbed. The varieties we offer are the best for this purpose and are all hardy.

LILIUM, or LILY BULBS

There is no garden complete without the stately and delicate Lilies, and there is no need for any garden to be without them because they are both inexpensive and easy of culture. They are especially desirable in the perennial border, among shrubbery, or in masses where strong effects are striven for. They are perfectly hardy, vigorous and free growing.

A splendid bed of Dutch Hyacinths

DUTCH HYACINTHS

So many have already discovered the charm of this glorious spring flower that we feel any other introduction on our part entirely unnecessary. These Hyacinths may be used outdoors in great masses for their wonderful color-effects and delicate odor; or they may be forced indoors in pots or in water and make a very lovely decorative house plant for early spring.

Early French or Roman Hyacinths

From sunny France comes this ancient little Hyacinth with the delicate perfume, that blooms as early as November when forced, and is at its best as a cut-flower, but commonly used as a pot-plant also. Not hardy enough for outdoor planting, but charming for house decoration.

Plan Perennial Planting Now

HE Palisades Popular Perennials and Shrubs make the permanent gardening effects—the kind that assure a garden-feeling the year round. Plants that bloom and wither in a week or two at their respective seasons have a place, but return a minimum of compensation for the toil and care you devote to their planting and growth. With Perennials the conditions are diametrically opposite. You obtain a maximum compensation, one that every season enhances.

Ours it is to supply the Perennials and Shrubs which best suit your rockery and garden plans. We have the choice and facilities. Late, or May-Flowering Tulips

This type of Tulip has become deservedly popular in recent years, and is grown in large quantities for naturalizing and bedding in public parks and private grounds. They bloom in May and early June. As they have long stems, and the large showy flowers last several days when cut and placed in water, they make a very desirable cut-flower for commercial or private use. For early summer-flowering effects in the hardy border there is nothing better than a mass-planting of the late Tulips.
